THIS BRIGHT BEGINNING . . .

Our bright beginning is one of youth, strength, pride and confidence; a foundation on which to build and progress. The youth and strength inherent in our traditions, and the pride of being an intricate part of this expanding institution fosters the confidence in a future that will be as shining as this bright beginning.

Board of Trustees

The Very Reverend Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., S.T.D., Rector Provincial of the Province of St. Thomas of Villanova, is Chairman of the Board of Trustees. A true friend of Merrimack, Father Greenlee brings to his high administrative office a wealth of experience gained through many years in college classrooms.

TRUSTEES: Fathers Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., James M. Hurley, O.S.A., the late John B. Martin, O.S.A., Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Patrick J. Campbell, O.S.A., John J. Daley, O.S.A., and Thomas F. Walsh, O.S.A.

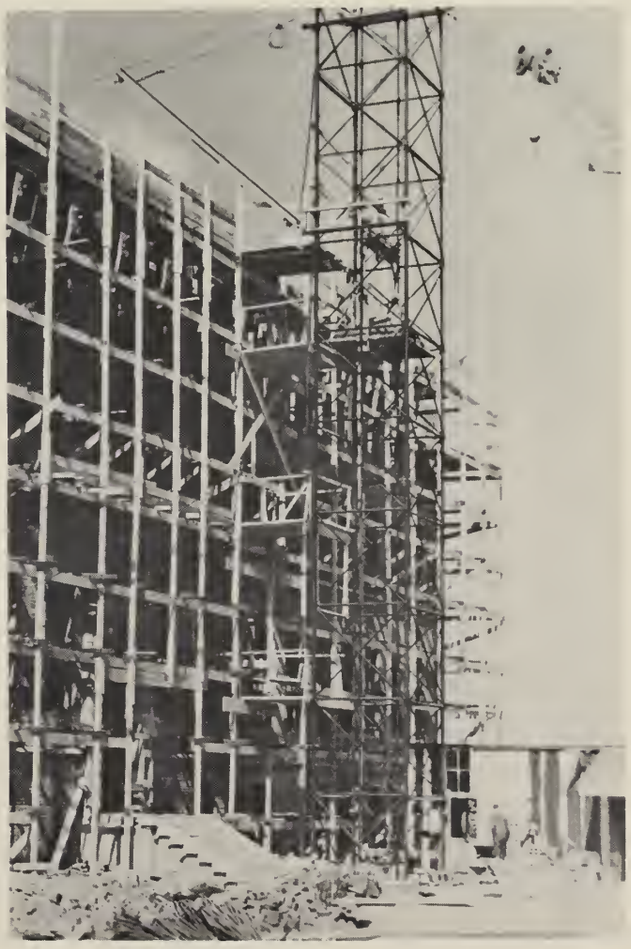
A Brief Resume On . . .

How can one relate the history of an institution? The story of Merrimack College is so much more than that. The dreams of so many courageous people, the foresight and driving enthusiasm of His Excellency, Archbishop Richard J. Cushing, and the Augustinian Fathers, the sacrifice and confidence of the business and civic leaders of the Merrimack Valley, the continued and divine guidance and assistance from Christ the Teacher and His Holy Mother—these are the glories of Merrimack.

Shortly following the close of World War II, a meeting was called of the veteran's educational panel of a Haverhill Labor-Management Committee under the direction of J. Leo Cronin. The problem in point was the anticipated overflow of students in colleges and universities following the return of thousands of veterans seeking higher education. The members of the committee decided that the ideal solution would be a college in the Merrimack Valley. A consultation with the Most Reverend Richard J. Cushing followed. The Archbishop accepted the idea and shortly thereafter announced that the Augustinian Fathers would assume the tremendous task of founding and staffing the newly conceived institution. The Very Reverend Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., Ph.D., a man of boundless energy and dynamic personality, then serving as Chairman of the Veteran's Bureau at Villanova, accepted the responsibilities of President of Merrimack College. Father McQuade and the trustees formulated their plans and on April 27, 1947, received the charter from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that made Merrimack College a reality.

Construction was begun on the first building of the new college in the summer of 1947. On September 22 at St. Augustine's Church in Andover, Archbishop Cushing presided over the dedication ceremonies which were celebrated by the Very Reverend Mortimer A. Sullivan, the late Prior Provincial. A week later classes began in Guild Hall which housed class rooms, offices, library and chapel. The first student body consisted of one hundred and sixty-five members; the initial faculty numbered fourteen. The desire for accomplishment and the avid spirit of this group resulted in the beginnings of the Fraternity of the Holy Name, the Student Council, the Glee Club, and the Annual Retreat.

The following year, 1948, proved to be a successful one. Parents of the students and friends of the college united to organize the Association of Merrimack College. They wasted no time in proving their sincerity and on June 4, 1948, held a mammoth Penny Sale at the Lawrence Memorial Stadium. Proceeds from the sale were utilized for the construction of a new gymnasium which was begun in the fall of the same year.



GUILD HALL: The parent building of the College has been renovated to serve as the Engineering School with an ever expanding store of technical equipment.

SULLIVAN HALL: The Liberal Arts building houses the classrooms and laboratories for Business Administration, Biology and Nursing courses as well as the canteen and the bookstore.

AUSTIN HALL: The nerve center of the campus, the faculty residence and administration building contains all the administrative offices and the library.

CUSHING HALL: The Science Building anchors one end of the quadrangle to be. Here are all the laboratories and scientific apparatus needed for the higher courses in Chemistry and Physics.

Scholasticism Within

The next venture of Merrimack College was a million dollar drive for funds. Through the kindness and generosity of the friends of the Merrimack the drive was eminently successful and, as a result, construction of the campus proper was begun. In September of 1948, ground breaking ceremonies were held for Cushing Hall, the new science building.

The next few years were years of memorable events and a rapid expansion of the College proper. In June, 1951, Commencement exercises were held for the first graduating class of Merrimack College. Autumn of the same year brought coeducational policies to a student body which had hitherto been all male. In September, 1951, Sullivan Hall, the Liberal Arts building was ready for occupancy. Austin Hall, the faculty and administration building, was completed in 1952 and on September 29, Archbishop Cushing solemnly blessed the campus and dedicated the new buildings. In April, 1954, the Archbishop returned to preside over the ground breaking ceremonies for the Collegiate Chapel of Christ the Teacher. The Chapel, a gift from Merrimack's most benevolent friend, the Archbishop himself, was dedicated in May, 1955, at a solemn high Mass celebrated by His Excellency. The Chapel, a beautiful and imposing structure, is the physical symbol of the goal toward which all intellectual endeavors are directed.

• PRESIDENT

The Very Reverend Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., Ph.D., President of Merrimack College. Taken from the ranks of college professors Father McQuade has directed the founding and building of Merrimack from its inception. A dynamic leader, Father McQuade envisages ever widening horizons for the College.

The Reverend Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A., Ph.D., is Dean of the Faculty. The academic life of the College is his special province. The relations of the faculty with the administration, and the problems of the individual students are handled with a personal concern and friendliness that is Father Gildea.

• DEAN

LIBERAL ARTS

A liberal arts education is that type of higher learning and cultural advancement which encourages the student to delve into the main fields of knowledge. The curriculum is carefully and specially planned to give the individual a full, well-balanced education. The liberal arts course develops every aspect of the human being, the physical body, the spiritual soul and the intellectual processes of the mind.

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

The program of studies offered by the Business Administration Department gives the student a varied training of the procedures vital to the business sector of society. Broad cultural courses are integrated with concentrations in the fields of Marketing, Accounting, and Business Management. The objective of such a curriculum is to produce potential executives. Today's world of business demands such a type: one who can think, who possesses the fundamental professional competence, who is alive to the problems of contemporary society, and, most of all, one whose motivation is dominated by the Christian ethical and cultural values upon which our civilization depends.

ENGINEERING

With the rapid growth of industry in this country in the past few years, there has arisen a great need for technically trained men and women who are capable of putting to practical use all the new scientific discoveries. With this demand for engineers in mind, Merrimack College established a Division of Engineering in the fall of 1951. Since that time, the engineering division has grown by leaps and bounds and now courses are offered in both Civil and Electrical Engineering. Because Merrimack is also a Liberal Arts College, the humanities are not forgotten and each aspirant engineer is required to elect courses in the fields of Philosophy, History and English as well as courses in Physics, Mathematics and the many and varied engineering subjects.

SECRETARIAL SCIENCE

The two year and four year Secretarial Science Courses offer a concentrated and intensive curriculum covering the many aspects of the secretarial field. The prospective secretary acquires proficiency in typing, shorthand, machine calculation, and general office procedure. A proper integration of liberal arts courses provides the broadness of background so necessary in today's complex civilization. The student enters the business world with the sure confidence of a highly trained professional.

Provisions have been made at Merrimack for the education of those who would find it difficult to attend the regular sessions. In the evening, courses are given which lead to Associate Degrees in Arts or Business Administration and Certificates in Secretarial Science. During the summer months classes are held for students who must make up required courses and for teachers and others who wish to further their education.

ACTIVITIES

Academic competence is, of course, of first importance, but unless a person is able to live and work with others in friendship and harmony his talents may never achieve fruition. Hence the reason for the co- and extracurricular activities.

In plenary session the Student Council thrashes out a pressing problem: M. Barron, R. Wesson, R. Mackey, R. Langevin, J. McColgan, J. Valeri, J. Baum, E. Silvestri, R. Gilmore, Chairman.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The parent body of all student activities is the Student Council. Elected representatives of the three upper classes form a governing board for the regulation and coordination of all co-and extracurricula clubs and functions. Its duties include the supervision of club and class elections, the organization of various drives, the enforcement of campus regulations, and the preparation of the annual college calendar. Moreover, it is the final organ of student expression in relation to the college administration on matters of mutual interest.

PHILOSOPHY CLUB

A recent addition to extra-curricular activity at Merrimack is the Philosophy Club, more commonly known as the "Metaquins." The club is composed of Liberal Arts majors and also those students whose curriculum does not call for philosophy courses.

The purpose of the club is to familiarize its members with scholastic philosophy. These discussions inevitably stimulate intellectual activity and make philosophy a topic of "every day" conversation.

Don Chabot's discussion of Aristotle evokes varying responses from the serious-minded members of the Philosophy Club.

CADUCEAN CLUB

"Caduceans" examine some of the Biology Department's collection of zoological and botanical exhibits.

The Caducean Club was organized by the members of the Biology department in the fall of 1954. The club, under the proctorship of Dr. John T. Lawlor, chairman of the Department of Biology, sponsors field trips to various hospitals and biological laboratories, supplemented by lectures of prominent biologists. Through such activities the members are able to correlate classroom work with science in action.

The Merrimack Warrior

As an outlet for student literary endeavors and a source of managerial experience the Warrior presents a monthly coverage of newsworthy campus events. Additional color is added by way of such feature items as the colloquial expository "Coed's Corner," complete sports coverage under "Sportlite," the informative "Things Literary," and the "Chaplain's Corner." Editorials provide a forum for student expression on subjects ranging from politics to philosophy.

The Warrior is in one respect a printed document of memorable events, a record of individual and group accomplishment, a sounding board for new ideas, and the most prominent media of campus communication.

Various skills are required for the publication of a college newspaper. These are combined in the Editorial Board which meets at frequent intervals to assemble the material to meet the deadline of the Warrior: H. Foster, D. Seafard, J. Higgins, J. Maney, J. Valeri, Editor-in-Chief, F. MacDonald, R. Wesson, R. Gilmore, L. DeSimone.

Gathering the facts is one of the most important funetions of a newspaper. Here Editor Valeri briefs Warrior reporters on coming newsworthy events to be covered in the next issue.

Frank MacDonald edits his sports' column with all the aplomb of a eharter member of the Fourth Estate.

"Oh," shouts Betty, "my name is in the paper"

Merrimackan rewriters in a weekly conference with the Literary Editor.

Photography Editors supervise the photographer in their customary "serious" manner.

In preparing the 1956 edition of the "Merrimackan," the staff has had one paramount aim: to present, in so far as possible, the spiritual, the intellectual, and the social activity at college. This has been accomplished, largely, through a pictorial history of the past year's events.

The Yearbook is for the students, past and present, who are making the College great, and for their relatives, and also for prospective students who see a future with us. It is also for those patrons who are interested in knowing how a college is created, how its traditions grow, and the kind of men and women who grow out of it.

DRAMATICS

B-r-r-r-r-ing — "I'll moider da bum, Boss!"

"Listen youse guys, we can parlay dis Eoiwin character into a pile a dough!"

"Honest, dear, Sweet Marie and Lucky Lulu are only horses!"

"All the World's a Stage," and indeed, there are many parts to be played. The "On Stagers" of Merrimack College have imbibed the thespian spirit of the great dramatists—a tradition of all institutions of higher learning. From the design of stage settings to the intricacies of plot characterization, the dramatic society of the College has systematically applied itself. This past year has seen two major productions hit the boards: "The Gentleman from Athens" directed by Mr. Thomas Quinlan, and "Three Men on a Horse" directed by Father Francis X. Smith, O.S.A.

"Chee, Patsy, ya didn't lose da ten grand, didja?"

The Board of Governors meets to appraise "Tammany" Cleary's bookkeeping.

Supplementing formal couses with informal discussions, the members of the Business Club familiarize themselves with current business trends.

ACCOUNTING AND BUSINESS CLUBS

The "Executive Suite" in Room #105. This is the purpose of the Merrimack College Business Club. Students majoring in economics, marketing, business administration, accounting, and secretarial science are afforded an opportunity through this organization to supplement class discussions with informal talks given by prominent businessmen and by field trips to local offices. These activities are aimed towards familiarizing the student with new trends and preparing him to cope with the problems of the business world.

The members of the Accounting Club meet to formulate plans for a series of field trips to industrial establishments.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Under the direction of Mr. St. Germain, Assistant Professor of Political Science, the Political Science Club has participated in many phases of political life. Lectures by experts in public administration, town managers, and active politicians have served to bring the theory of classroom lectures down to every day life. In addition to field trips to neighboring towns and public institutions, a governmental survey tour to Canada completed a highly successful academic year.

Members of the Political Science Club visit a Town Meeting to acquire practical experience with the governmental processes.

SECRETARIAL SCIENCE AND LITERAY CLUBS

The Secretarial Science Club was organized in 1954 to supplement the classroom work of the secretarial students and provide a link with the business world. The activities of the club are two-fold, educational and social including a series of informative lectures, the annual Fashion Show, Career Girls' Luncheon, and the highly successful Minstrel Show.

The one hundred and fifty ton testing machine enables the young engineer to test engineering materials of all types.

ENGINEERING GUILD AND BENZENE RING

Members of the Benzene Ring, pondering over a molecular model, discuss the intricacies of cyclic compounds. Bill McCarthy exhibits an expression of wonderment at the ring bondage and the side chains of the compound in point.

The Engineering Guild was organized in order to supplement the classroom and laboratory work of our prospective engineers. This has been accomplished by means of lectures by prominent men in the field, excursions to points of scientific interest and discussions by the students themselves. The Guild also sponsors several social and co-curricular activities throughout the year, the most noteworthy of which in the highly successful "Transit Trot."

A student familiarizes himself with a motor generator, taking data for characteristic curves.

The Benzene Ring, a student affiliation of the American Chemical Society, was founded by the college's chemistry students under the advisorship of Dr. Laurence Frizzel. By way of bimonthly meetings opportunities are provided for student discussion of current developments in the scientific fields with supplementing field trips to laboratories and chemical plants.

RELIGION

At Merrimack College, religion is both an academic study and a guide for every day living. It provides an unchanging standard for the individual and society and serves as a weapon against the spread of secularism and communism which are so prevalent in the world today. The students are thoroughly instructed in the tenets of Divine Revelation and the principles of Catholic morality by the Augustinian Fathers. The importance of putting into practice all the theory of classroom work is stressed at every turn.

Under the capable direction of Reverend James E. Hannan, O.S.A., our college chaplain, the religious organizations at Merrimack College function smoothly and efficiently. The Fraternity of the Holy Name is composed of the men on campus and is associated with the Holy Name Societies of their home parishes. Its members strive to promote reverence and respect for the Holy Name of Jesus. The co-eds are members of the Sodality of Our Mother of Good Counsel which seeks to increase devotion to Our Blessed Mother. The Cana Society was established for the benefit of our married students and is again becoming active due to their increased numbers at Merrimack. These religious organizations work either singly or as a combined unit to sponsor social activities and to participate in the corporal and spiritual works of mercy.

IN MEMORY OF VERY REV
JOSEPH M. DOUGHERTY C.S.

The results of the Annual Holy Name Breakfast seem encouraging.

As is most fitting, each fall term is opened with a three day retreat and at the beginning of the second semester a Day of Recollection is held. During the year, every student has the opportunity to assist at daily Mass and Communion in the newly erected Collegiate Church of Christ the Teacher, the gift of our beloved Archbishop. There are also weekly novena devotions and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament to which all students are invited.

Confessions are heard at the convenience of students in keeping with the College's policy of integrating religion with everyday living.

Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament is held every Wednesday noon to enable the students to obtain a direct blessing from Christ the Great Teacher.

The academic year traditionally begins with a three day Retreat. This year the Mass and Retreat were held in the Chapel for the first time.

Prominent members of the Cana Society present their plans for the coming year to their moderator, Father Murray.

MERRIMACK

SPORTS

Sports are a popular and effective way of building healthy bodies and of instilling the qualities of sportsmanship and resilience. The program of athletics is designed to afford all students an opportunity to engage in their favorite pastime, both as participants and as loyal but fair rooters.

BASKETBALL

The mad scramble erupts as Bill Nestor and Jack McDaid jump for possession of the ball.

William Nestor
Captain

The cheerleaders, always the staunch and stalwart supporters of the basketball team, appear to be more than slightly perturbed at the goings-on on the floor.

The swish of basket after basket has become a familiar sound as the Merrimack Warriors, spirited by Captain Bill Nestor, have made an impressive record this year. In his first full season as hoop mentor Coach Harrington has developed a team of veterans strengthened by outstanding freshman prospects. Lacking a tall middle-man, the Warriors substituted an amazing exhibition of ball-hawking and ball-handling, playing a hard brand of ball throughout the season. The familiar forms of Nestor, Zappella, Gomes and Hackney fought every inch of the way, as the cheering fans roared their approval.

VARSITY BASKETBALL SQUAD

Front Row—V. Gomez, F. Zappela, J. Hackney, J. Bell, F. Collopy, H. Goodrow. Back Row—W. Nestor, L. Demetrolakas, R. Twomey, J. McDaid, E. Graczyk, C. Samataro.

Wa-a-ay up . . . a long stretch.

Roger Twomey scrambles for a high rebound. "Relax fellows, I've got this one."

"Watch him—he's dead on push-shots."

"Now if I can just get by those big hands."

"Leaping Louie" outjumps opposition.

INTRAMURALS

Will Jack get through?—Not if Frank can help it.

For those sports enthusiasts whose ability or curriculum does not permit participation in varsity sports an extensive intramural program has been established. Well organized basketball teams comprise an interclass league whose prime characteristics are individual team spirit and sharp sportsman-like rivalry. The intramural league provides the stimulus for the development of a genuine competitive spirit, the will to win and the ability to accept defeat gracefully.

The boys' answer to the modern dance class.

The intramural sports program is not confined to indoor activity.

The camera's eye picks up a foul that the referee misses.

HOCKEY

One of the brighter spots on the growing Merrimack campus is the new outdoor hockey rink. Planned and built by Father Paul Thabault and several interested students, the rink is equipped with lights for night games. Completely outfitted with new uniforms, the team is busily preparing for college competition.

The Merrimack Warriors' forward line anxiously waits for the puck to press home the charge.

Front Row: J. McColgan, P. Griffin, J. Twomey (Capt.), W. Rand, C. Levesque.
Back Row: Fr. Thabault, L. Hamel, A. Shannon, A. Morneau, L. O'Keefe, M. Carrington, E. Roche, W. Towne, W. McDonald, J. Burns (Mgr.)

TENNIS

Tennis is the sport voted "most likely to condition the reflexes," and Art Rogers and his team are really on their toes. With several years of experience and an enlarged roster, the squad achieved the best winning percentage of any Merrimack team.

"This is one of those new nylon nets"—members of the Tennis Team compare rackets as they prepare for a game.

SKIING

Whether novice, weekender, or expert, a member of the ski club finds real pleasure in the adventurous challenge of daring ski runs.

A weekend of thrills, spills, and healthful enjoyment is provided by frequent trips to the white slops of New Hampshire.

In preparation, the club sponsors instruction sessions which teach skiing from the most basic to the most intricate techniques. Through this program the club provides the student an opportunity to display the sporsmanship so vital to a well-balanced personality.

The annual Ski Trip affords many "Merrimackans" the opportunity to spend their mid-year vacation schussing over the white slopes of New Hampshire mountains.

FRESHMEN

Our Freshmen! What would college be without them? Scared and bewildered they arrived on campus in September and after solving the many problems associated with registration they donned beanies and buttons and took on the trials of the orientation period. The sophomore Orientation Committee members and Student Court were the dread of all frosh who followed any course but the one prescribed in the college handbook. With the Orientation Dance came freedom from the persecution of the sophomores and a chance to prove to the upperclassmen that the Class of '59 was one which would leave its mark in the history of Merrimack College. Their versatility in the Variety Show and enthusiastic participation in college activities promise well for the future.

The end of the Orientation Period brings the shedding of beanies and buttons. Exhuberant freshmen exhibit their joy in a stomping party.

and

Perhaps the most frequent offense against the "Freshman Code" is negligence in the wearing of "Regs." Violators have their punishment meted out to them by the student Court, to the amusement of the upperclassmen.

SOPHOMORES

CLASS OFFICERS: Seated—Rowena Gonsalves, Secretary. Standing—Pat Cambria, Vice-President; Bob McLaughlin, Treasurer; Joe Hackney, President.

New methods are constantly being devised to obtain evidence on Freshmen offenders.

Those 8:30 classes don't seem to bother our "Casein girls."

The parlor at Cascia Hall provides a pleasant atmosphere where Sophomores meet informally to make plans for the Orientation Dance.

With an air of rank superiority, a vivacious and excited group returned to the Merrimack Campus to commence their term as sophomores. It was their happy lot to reign supreme, as Orientation Committee members, over the poor bewildered freshmen. Not only did they act as guards to enforce the wearing of "beanies 'n buttons" but they performed a congenial task in assisting the new students in their difficult adjustments to the routine of college life. The lively spirit of this class has manifested itself in many successful social functions sponsored by them.

JUNIORS

The Juniors—a personification of that "old college try"—a streak of energy when there's a job to be done—a united group of scholars with a light of frivolity in their eyes. As upperclassmen they have made that all important choice of a field of concentration and as a result have spent long hours in the library and laboratory doing the research associated with their newly acquired status. They have taken on important positions of leadership in the Student Council, the staffs of our publications, the field of sports and in the clubs connected with the various courses. The social highlight of the year was, of course, Junior Week with the planting of the class tree, sports day, parent's night, and the memorable Promenade.

Ed Sylvestri—"Mr. Dependable" of the Junior Class.

CLASS OFFICERS: Tom Flynn, Treasurer; Frank MacDonald, Vice-President; Colleen Whitely, Secretary; Bill Axford, President.

Lively faces—proof that interest in a spirited class discussion does not end with the bell.

Such concentration . . . can this be true?

Class meetings keep the officers on their toes, explaining and defending their policies before their constituents. Members of the Junior Class wait for President Axford's reaction to a suggestion.

Dances

"Parfait," appears to be the expression describing the luncheon served at the Junior-Senior Tea Dance.

Joe Pappalardo's rich baritone voice is much in demand at all of Merrimack's social activities.

The beautifully appointed Sheraton-Plaza Hotel provided a suitable decor for the Tea Dance, the social highlight of the year.

Jane and Joe Frosh—Claire Filteau and Jimmy Bell, present their interpretation of the Mambo, symbolizing the close of Orientation.

The Orientation Dance, is the most popular informal of the year. Barbara and Joe, however, appear to be oblivious of the swirl about them.

How fitting to begin Junior Week with the Mass celebrated by the class moderator, Father Murray, in the inspiring chapel of Austin Hall.

Leo Galeazzi and his two chic daughters are beaming proof to those waiting in line for Frank's coffee and doughnuts that it is all worthwhile.

Junior Week

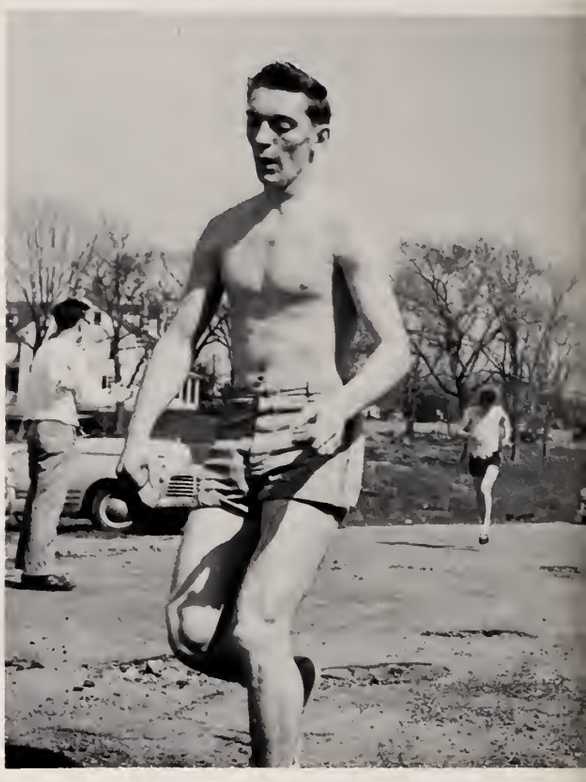
Preparations for Junior Week were begun early in the fall semester and after the unanimous decision to make this week one of the most outstanding social events in the history of the college, work was begun in earnest. As was most fitting, the week opened with Mass on Sunday in the new Collegiate Church of Christ the Teacher. Then in rapid succession followed the official planting of the class tree, sports day with its many spirited contests, Parents' Night when we offered our parents a token of our appreciation for their many sacrifices in our behalf, the gala Junior Prom which had as its setting the decor of the beautiful Caribbean isles, and the long awaited Junior Dinner Dance, the social highlight of the year, held at the Parker House Roof.

Traditional tree planting . . . and we chose a weeping willow!

Rosemary Pert Marshall checks to see that all is well at Parents' Night.

Sports Day

THE WINNERS! Front Row—J. Williams, E. Collins, J. Twomey, J. Walker, G. Riley, R. Anstiss. Second Row—T. Tivnan, A. Doiron, W. MacDonald, R. Langevin, F. Collopy, A. Doiron, J. Powers.



Bursting energy and last minute spurts lent excitement to Sports Day.

Prom

Grand March? Well, of course! If the class officers in the foreground are representative of the atmosphere of the Junior Prom, then everyone had a Ball-l-l-l.

Louie seems to have had a hectic evening, but lovely Mary Ellen, Queen of the Junior Prom, looks sparkling.

A technicolor relief map of the Caribbean area provided a spectacular entrance to our make-believe island cruise. Jean and Leo admire the handiwork.

The regal setting of the Parker House Roof added a perfect, but final, touch to our Junior Week.

and Dinner Dance

"Tammany" in action. Need we say more?

Class President Mal Hart and his date ascend the beautifully muraled stairway leading to the main ballroom.

The cosmopolitan decor of the Parker House Ballroom befits the eleganee of the Dinner Danee.

Senior Ball

Colorful gowns and happy faces make for a gay evening.

A Senior beauty makes a grand entrance.

Senior President Jack Twomey and his date seem oblivious to the decor.

Intermission finds a happy group of Seniors clustering around the refreshment table—so dainty . . . so piquant.

There she is . . . Queen of the Ball . . . in regal splendor . . . and Leo so proud, ("I knew it all the time") . . . the class of 1956 has completed its social calendar.

The festivities of the "Snowflake Dance" were highlighted by the colorful Grand March. The tempo changes, the orchestra swings into a waltz, the spell is broken.

COMMENCEMENT

The graduation exercises of the Fifth Commencement of Merrimack College began with the baccalaureate services on the evening of June 3, 1955. The Very Reverend James Hurley, O.S.A., Pastor and Prior of Saint Mary's Church in Lawrence, delivered the sermon. The student choir chanted the music for the Solemn High Mass celebrated by the Very Reverend Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., Ph.D., President of the College, on Saturday morning. Inclement weather made it necessary to transfer the conferral of diplomas from the quadrangle to the Church of Christ the Teacher. The academic procession of the graduates, alumni and honorary alumni, the administration and distinguished guests filed through the halls of the College to the rostrum presided over by His Excellency, the Most Reverend Richard J. Cushing, D.D., Archbishop of Boston. Some seventy-three candidates received Bachelor degrees in Liberal Arts, Chemistry, Medical Technology, Business Administration and Civil Engineering; eighteen Certificates in Secretarial Studies, and eight in the Part-time Division. The guest of honor, and recipient of an Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws was His Eminence, the Most Reverend Francis Cardinal Spellman, D.D., Archbishop of New York, who delivered the Commencement Address.

The eloquent Valedictorian delivers his address before the honored guests, faculty, and graduating students in the Collegiate Church of Christ the Teacher.

Eugene Barrett is presented his degree by the President of the College, the Very Reverend Vincent A. McQuade, as Joseph Bacharowski greets Cardinal Spellman.

His Excellency Francis Cardinal Spellman and His Eminence Archbishop Cushing exchange cordialities as Father McQuade looks on.

The climax of four years of arduous studies is reached as His Eminence congratulates those who have received their degrees.

Acknowledgments

• The publication of a book such as the Merrimackan necessarily involves a great deal of technical assistance, perceptive judgment and cooperation. It is to the following, therefore, that the editors wish to express their indebtedness for supplying these indispensables.

• To Rev. Albert C. Shannon, O.S.A., Moderator of the Merrimackan, who has spent unsparingly of his time and abilities, without which this book would not be possible.

• To Mr. John C. Ursprung, jr., of William T. Cooke Publishing Inc., for his indispensable professional aid and his untiring patience with tyros.

• To Mr. Robert Talbot and Miss E. Marie Coletti, of the Loring Studios, for their guidance and superb photographic service.

• Lastly to all those, faculty and students, who in so many ways gave of their time or skills, the editors wish to express their gratitude.
